His Catholick Majesty's MANIFESTO, justifying his Conduct in Relation to the late CONVENTION.

The KING.

OUR Desire not to disturb the Tranquility of Europe, and to maintain Peace to our Subjects, has for some Time past, in a great measure made a Violence on the Nicety of our Honour, and the Advantages of our Interests.

England, troubled with Domestick Divisions, has carried on her Complaints with such Obstinacy, even perhaps contrary to the Knowledge of the Unreasonableness thereof, that if our sincere Disposition had not found a greater Weight in the former Considerations than in his Instances, such Disputes would have come before now to a fatal Rupture, not without powerful Motives on our Behalf. The Truth of this is evident from the Answers given to her Officers, and our Condescentions to her Proposals; such was the admitting of the Regulation made at London of the Demands, without taking Notice of the exorbitant Valuation of her Prizes, nor of the Undervaluing of ours, only to obtain Peace at the moderate Rate of dissembling this advantage in Favour of that Crown: The remaining Part of the Negotiation was, on our Side conformable to so noble a Sincerity. The Ministry at London reckoned on our Claims upon the Assiento Company for the Payment which we were to make, and though, when the Company refused to pay the same, we might have made use of this Failure, in order to alter other Agreements, the same Ministry knows that we sent Orders to Don Thomas Geraldino, our Minister Plenipotentiary at that Court, to take up at Interest the 95,000 l. that what had been promised should not remain uncomplied with.

Immediately after the Convention was signed at the Pardo, and that it was ratified at London, We prompted by our good Faith, ordered our Squadrons to be disarmed, sent the stipulated Directions to Florida, and discharged all that was then incumbent on us. Much contrary to this way of Proceeding did England act; for having undoubtedly repented the calling home from the Mediterranean Admiral Haddock's Squadron, she ordered it to be stationed at Gibraltar; a more proper Place for effecting the Design, that in all Appearance was even then in Agitation, and has since been discovered; and at the same time no Orders were dispatched to Carolina. The British King did back the unjust Transactions of the Company, deeming their Concerns as an Engagement of the Crown, whereas before the Convention they were looked upon as a Contract with a private Person.

These Appearances of not proceeding with Unanimity in their Intentions, obliged us to cause our first Secretary of State, and of the Dispatches, the Marquis de Villarias, in the beginning of April last, to declare to Mr. Benjamin Keene, Minister Plenipotentiary of the King of Great Britain at our Court, how much the stay of Admiral Haddock's squadron at Gibraltar would hinder the total Effect of the Convention, notwithstanding any Securities that might be offered; and finding that such Insinuations were not sufficient to check the Danger that was threatening, we resolved that in the first formal Conference which our Plenipotentiaries should have with those of England, they should repeat more at large the same Declaration: That the Fault of making ineffectual what had been stipulated should never be imputed to us. The Effects of this becoming Conduct have not been such as ought to be expected, but have rather been conformable to the Conduct observed by England, as is already mentioned in Substance: That is, to have given Orders to Admiral Haddock to cruize with his Squadron between Cape St. Vincent, and Cape St. Mary's, in order to wait for, and surprize the Assogue Ships: To publish Reprisals in an unbecoming Stile at London, and to proceed to their Execution in several Parts, as it appears to us authentically, by divers Depositions of those who have experienced them. Our Forbearance being thus provoked, and it becoming now a Disgrace to our Power and Sovereignty, to continue any longer in the Inaction hitherto observed, we have determined that there be likewise Reprisals made in our Dominions, and by our Subjects, wherever they meet with them, of the Ships, Goods, and Effects of the King and Subjects of Great Britain, observing such Rules as shall be directed in the circular Orders, which shall be issued for that Purpose. And to the End that this Resolution, and the powerful Motives that have moved us thereto, may come to every Body's Knowledge, we have thought proper to make it publick in the foregoing Manner. Given at St. Ildefonso, the 20th Day of August, 1739.

I the KING.

And lower, Don Sebastian de la Quadra.

MADRID, September 22.

WE hear from Cadiz, that the English Consul, and all the respective Merchants of that Nation, set sail from thence a few Days ago; they were enjoin'd by the King's Declaration to depart from that Place within eight Days, under Pain of being treated as Prisoners of War. Our Consul has sent two Commissaries to Burgos, who are said to be charged to settle the Indulto on the Assogue Ships. They add, that Admiral Haddock's Squadron has disappeared within these few Days; and that the Admiral has dismiss'd several French Tartanes which he had stopp'd. We have Advice from Malaga;

Malaga; that 4 of the Engliſh Ships out 9, that were ſtopp'd there, are confiſcated. An Engliſh Ship from the Levant having been obliged by a Storm to put in at Barcelona, was ſequeſter'd there immediately, and we are aſſured that ſhe has a conſiderable Cargo. They write from Oporto, that ſix Spaniſh Privateers are ſail'd to cruize on the Engliſh. The bad Harveſt they have had in Andaluſia this Year, as well as the laſt, occaſions a great Scarcity of Corn in that Province, eſpecially becauſe Foreign Veſſels dare not venture to bring any into Cadiz, for fear of being ſtopt by ſome of the Britiſh Men of War. They write from Ferrol, that they have planted ſeveral Batteries near that Port, to keep off the Enemy's Ships of War.

LONDON, Octob 6. All neceſſary Ezpedition, we hear, will be uſed in fitting out the Eaſt-India Company's Yatcht for her Voyage to St. Helena, where ſhe is to ſtop the European homeward-bound Ships from coming away ſeparately, but to ſtay there in a Body till a Convoy probably be appointed to conduct them.

The William and John, Capt. Leggat of Hull, bound from Gallipoly for Holland, with above 200 Casks of Oil, on Account of Dutch Merchants, was lately taken by a Spaniſh Privateer, and carried into Alicant.

We hear that a one Million Lottery for the Service of the enſuing Year, will be ſet on Foot in the next Seſſion of Parliament.

Octob. 9. Eight more Men of War will be put in Commiſſion and fitted out with all convenient Speed.

The Contractors with the Commiſſioners of the Victualling are obliged to deliver 160 Oxen and 600 Hogs every Week, which are killed at the Office for the Uſe of the Navy.

We hear the Commiſſioners of his Majeſty's Navy, will ſpeedily contract with the Merchants, for Ships to be bought into the Government's Service, to be converted into Fire-ſhips, which Number 'tis ſaid will be augmented to 36 Sail.

'Tis certain that a Reſolution is taking for raiſing Ten Regiments of Horſe, Foot, and Dragoons, and Five of Marines, againſt next Spring.

We hear that ſeveral Treaties with certain Powers are on foot, in order to Ballance the Engagements the French have enter'd into; which Powers have obliged themſelves, in caſe of need, to act vigorouſly next Spring, to curb the Proweſs and haughty Threats of that intriguing Nation; which begins to ſwell with unlimited Power, and are carrying on vaſt Deſigns, much in the ſame Manner as before the late bloody War.

From the London Magazine for the Month of July.

To the Rev. Mr. WHITEFIELD.

SWEET is thy voice, and manly is thy ſtrain,
Nor does thy wak'ning trumpet ſound in vain.
Then ſtill go on, proclaim thy Maſter's laws.
Warm'd with the promiſe of thy Lord's applauſe,
In that important, that tremendous day,
When ſeas ſhall vaniſh, rocks ſhall melt away;
When the great Judge impartially ſhall trace
The various actions of the human race.
In Zion's right, thou friend to Zion, riſe;
Plead her fair cauſe, and ſhew the heav'nly prize.
Let ſinners know, the dreadful day will come,
When Zion's enemies ſhall ſurely mourn;
Greatly their bold unrighteous deeds bewail,
When ſenſual joys, with ſenſual life ſhall fail.
Shew, that the man will hardly bear the touch,
Who dreads the being righteous over much.

Yet ſpare the man, where room to ſpare can be;
Let vice, not man, receive the laſh from thee.
And oh! beware! nor let thy zeal condemn,
For bare opinions, weak imperfect Men.
If I my brother judge, my views, if wrong,
Condemn myſelf, from my ungovern'd tongue.
Tis but in part we ſee, in part we know,
From diff'rent ſtations diff'rent proſpects flow:
Yet all may lead to the ſame point in view,
Which men, thro' various paths, laboriouſly purſue.
Here we but gain a glimpſe, ſtrait clouds ariſe;
Thoſe clouds ſhall vaniſh, when we reach the skies.
Mean while a humble mind our God requires,
Warm'd with cœleſtial hopes, and heavenly fires;
A mind which loves its God with all its heart,
And kind Aſſiſtance does to all impart.
O then beware!----------
Leſt in abſtracted thoughts, grown too refin'd,
Thou by raſh cenſure hurt'ſt thy pious mind.
When thou behold'ſt a face to Zion turn,
Joy in his joys, nor give the ſaint to mourn.
Point him the bliſs which from religion flows,
And all the charms of piety diſcloſe.
Tell how the Saviour left the realms on high,
Became a man, that he for man might die;
Save the repentant ſinner from the rod,
And once again reſtore him to his God;
Begot anew, to purity of heart,
He lives the Chriſtian and performs his part.
Theſe are important truths; ſuch truths purſue,
Which, ſtrict obedience, always keep in view.
From frantick impulſe guard thy faithful breaſt,
Nor give admittance to ſo falſe a gueſt.
Theſe were of late our modern prophets boaſt,
Too eaſy of belief, in ſtrong impulſes loſt
Ask them their force,; they honeſtly declare,
How ſtrong! how urgent! thoſe impreſſions were.
Take Lacy's word, thus far he freely own'd,
That he their pow'r, next to reſiſtleſs found.
Thus, by indulging, what he ſhould have prov'd,
He ſold himſelf a ſlave to what he lov'd.
What ſpirit rul'd! whence thoſe impulſes came!
Their falſe predictions loudly do proclaim.
They ſtifle truth, whilſt airy phantoms riſe,
And fill the clouded mind, with dark ſurmiſe;
Blow up the man, with enthus'aſtick rage,
And ev'ry pow'r, tumultuouſly engage;
Drive him to actions, which he did dereſt,
And raiſe a tempeſt in his doubtful breaſt:
At length the pangs of diſappointment riſe,
Croſs'd in his hopes, (once rapt above the skies)
He ſinks confounded, and uncertain dies.
Thus Ætna's fires, in mighty priſons pent,
Labour for room, and roar to find a vent;
Thro' all obſtruction, madly force their way;
A hideous ruin, o'er the plain diſplay.
Guard then thy mind, thy truſt with care diſcharge,
By calm reflection all thy pow'rs inlarge;
Let goſpel truths, alone, thy pen record;
The truths of Jeſus, whom thou own'ſt thy Lord.
Theſe be thy theme! whilſt hills to hills reſound,
And the vales eccho the returning ſound
Of ſong divine (all by thy voice inſpir'd)
From thouſand tongues, with love to goodneſs fir'd:
Ten thouſand tongues ſhall ſing their Maker's praiſe,
Whilſt thou, by truths, divine their paſſions raiſe.
Reaſon and paſſion in this ſcheme unite,
Here reaſon ſhines illuſtriouſly bright.

By

By her we judge what truths our God reveals,
And 'ſcape impoſture's ſnares, which ſhe in night conceals;
Try every proof which revelation gives,
Reaſon accords, faith triumphs, hope revives,
To righteous paths returns the wand'ring mind.
From open vice, and ſecret faults refin'd.
Thus may'ſt thou viſit ev'ry diſtant place,
Plow the rough ſeas, the Georgian mountains trace;
Teach the American, how good his claim,
Learn him to liſp his bleeding Saviour's name;
To know that God from whom all life derive,
And who eternal life will to obedience give.
May truth and goodneſs guide this great Deſign;
May'ſt thou the ſteep aſcent of heavenly wiſdom climb.
